3 Name the assumption that heterosexual couplehood is the default. [1]

Evidence and application

Fictional comparison: Erin and Jo marry in England and Wales and share care for Jo's parent, who lives nearby. Sam and Lou cohabit and describe a close friend as family because of years of mutual care. A service form recognises only 'husband' and 'wife'; another invites people to name a partner and relevant carers. Erin and Jo divide tasks unevenly because their paid-work hours differ. All four are described in the scenario as members of same-sex couples; no identity is inferred from appearance.

4 Apply two personal-life concepts to precise case details. [4]

5 Why cannot relationship category establish equal domestic work? [2]

6 Improve the claim that a legal reform makes all experiences identical. [3]
